Attending Courses and Writing Exams

Instructors and FAJ Directors may attend Foundation of Administrative Justice courses at no charge, on a stand-by basis only. The Society will not pay instructor or director fees nor will it reimburse any expenses.

Stand-by means that space is not guaranteed and the person's attendance cannot be confirmed until the day before the course begins. If the person or their organization wants to ensure a spot and attendance, they must pay the registration fee.

Instructors who instruct (as instructor, co-instructor or in-training instructor) the courses will not be required to write the exams but will be given credit for having completed the exam if they apply for the Certificate in Tribunal Administrative Justice.

FAJ Directors who wish to write exams must pay the exam fee and register to write the exam.
